EXPOSED

This story was...not sure what the right word would be for it? There were several errors relating to leaving words out AGAIN. I'm honestly not sure why I even bothered to continue with this series? of short stories, but I did. Sadly, they didn't get any better. Here was a short story, something starts to happen but not quick enough because it ends too abruptly.

Was Jeanine a masochist or something? Yet, when she meets up with Liam, she's thinking back to the guy in the alley sticking his tongue in her mouth. And how, basically, she didn't like it. Or later on when she's cleaning up, she's not able to get the guys stink out of her nose or hands off her face. If it was that bad, why did she make a big deal out of the situation?

How did Liam managed to get from the guys side of the prison (I assume) to the women's?

HEAT IN THE KITCHEN

I wasn't a fan of Jocelyn. She was way too much, as in completely full of herself. Blind folding him is one to thing but shoving her boob into his face, then cutting off his clothes...did I say she was full of herself? The funny thing in this situation would have been for Ethan to be gay. So she'd be doing all this sexual stuff to him, and it not having any effect. haha

Either way, the story was blah. Nothing happened. Boring.

Ethan regrets never getting married or having kids? Um, he's only 30!

How can either of them be in love with the other? Do they even really talk to each other? It's just sex!

She's so proud of herself because she worked so hard to become a chef? Seriously? Wouldn't it be 'all that' if you were working in a fancy, exclusive restaurant? Not making food for a single person.

How romantic? Or sexy is this line? "After a while she gave him a massage of his own, rubbing his private organ..." Oh yeah! haha

How did Edward Lewis put recording devices in Ethan's house?

NEGOCIATION First off, it's negotiation! How sad!

Boring again. The robotic dialog didn't help matters either. There wasn't much going on anyways. How does an author think that by writing this little bite of nothing-ness, that it would attract the reader to continue on with other books? I don't get it.

One thing I noticed that annoyed me was the fact that whenever someone was talking to another person, they kept using their name. Ex: "Mr. Logan can rest assured that I will continue to uphold my family's success and position in this industry...Mr. Logan has no worry about his stake..."

Wow another 'grandfather started business'. With someone whose a workaholic. Oh, and this time, both main characters are professional cooks! Surprise Surprise! If you're going to write two stories that are so similar, at least space them apart in the book. Common sense there.

The argument they had when Lucy was trying to get Jake to sign was really bad. I get it's a formal meeting, but it was way over done.

So Jake tells Lucy that he's taking her out to eat for dinner. Yet, arrives wearing jeans? Why does that not sound very likely?

I find it funny how the whole interaction between Lucy and Jake, involve them referring to each other by their last names. Yet, when they're having sex, she's calling out his first name. Or that's what I'd assume.

FORESTS DARK AND DEEP

Well here's something new. I liked this one. Sadly, I can't continue with this series because there is no way in hell I would pay $2.99 for a story that's only 24 pages. Nope.

Frustrated

I figured when I downloaded this book that it was 1 complete story. What a disappointment that this was not so. This book is the beginning of 4 different stories. I don't read series cliffhanger books. I like linked complete stories. The only one that peaked my interest was the last one but unfortunately not enough to get the next 2 books.
