the icean inheritance is the most glaring admission about the european's attempt to dominate the world through racism.there are a large number of books on this subject but the writers tend to hedge on the subject by inferring that in spite of the atrocities and the racism brought to this world by the caucasian race,they have given the world some order,some technology and arts and letters of lasting benefit.what the authors of these books do not take into consideration is that in spite of the contributions that benefit the world,europeans in their attempt at world domination created a disastrous climate for the world's people.

The iceman inheritance gives the reader a clear entry into Europeans attempt to dominate the world through racism; a system of oppression used to keep a "race" below another. In this book the author focuses on how Caucasian (white) people brought forth the concept of racism . Michael Bradley explains the contrast in how "society" views the Caucasian race; explains how although the race "supposedly brought" some order, technology , and other benefits of society. But as well as their improvements to society their pursuit to dominate the world created a difficult environment for other races.

This book isn't a fictional book with characters and a plot , nor is it a biography . I enjoyed the book. I really liked this book because the author a white male was not bias in his explanations and documentation of his own race, instead of filtering the information about his race( which made them like pure savages ) he didn't "suagr coat" anything. Also as a African- American citizen in America were racism is very obvious and who is very curious about "white supremacy" and its creators. Michael Bradley answered many questions I had about the topic. After reading this book I adopted a new perspective on a topic of discussion were I was quite ignorant in.

Christopher says

It all makes sense!

Phil Henderson says

I believe the book's overall premise is worthy of further investigation, though I believe that the aggressive behavior of Western man may have more to do with the climate in which he developed in (note that one can see the same aggression in many East Asians, Native North and South Americans, Middle Eastern people and even Africans) rather than residual Neanderthal DNA. After all, Neanderthals were not expansionist by nature--Homo Sapiens was and is.

More work has to be done to determine just what in the hell is wrong with our species--particularly that highly destructive and deranged Eurasian variety.

Time is the enemy of the iceman. Mechanical time was invented out of the syllabus of European culture depend on a linear or secular concept.

European time is absolute and becomes oppressive and dominates over human life. The European ideal of mechanical time and progress is not a universal statement of meaning.

Anyone outside of the culture could not progress using European linear time. Unclear where they would begin at but very clear where they would end.

The mechanical culture ultimate goal "technology wise" is the control of time therefore time is the enemy of European progress.

Completely fantasizing and constantly waging a future in which Europeans concept rules the past the present and the future in context of mechanical time.

These abstract goal do not literally exist. You must be trick into abstract future planning on a linear line of time. To Mass the fact mechanical time is a construct of the mind. And holds no bearing on human life but is anti human.
