Basic retelling of Alec Holland's demise before picking up on Swamp Thing wandering gloomily from swamp to swamp. The simple setting-up is understandable seeing how Volume 1 ended on a note that the creators totally disowned (Swamp Thing's baffling metamorphosis back into a human with the introduction of a terrible new villain). Then, the introduction of a time-honored plot device - give the monster a sympathetic deaf-mute child to take care of. Instant sympathy! Finally, throw in a shadowy syndicate and the cliffhanger intimation that... Alec Holland is dying! (suspenseful strings kick in)

Best quote: "Sorry... I can't feel pain... ...not... the physical kind, anyway..."

Now that's what I call a new level of xenobiological angst.
