Ivy Morgan is convinced life couldn't get better. She's happy, in love and since fall is her favorite season she's having a great time with the shifting weather. All of that changes when her boyfriend's mother and sister show up out of the blue and cast her life into disarray.

Jack Harker has never been happier, and even though he loves his mother and sister he's not thrilled with their arrival. Things only get worse when Jack's mother starts making demands, and the biggest one is that Jack cut his time in Shadow Lake short and return to southeastern Michigan.

Ivy's good mood turns sour quickly despite Jack's insistence that he has no intention of leaving. Despite the upheaval, Ivy does her best to get to know Jack's family. Things spiral out of control when danger hits town ... again.

When a local farmer is found dead on his property, Jack and Ivy find themselves embroiled in a dark mystery of epic proportions. The clues go back years and the suspect pool is unnaturally large given the number of workers on the farm.

Ivy is going to have her hands full. She has to charm Jack's mother, find a murderer and keep herself safe. When the end comes, Ivy finds herself saddled with an unlikely ally while Jack is fighting a battle against time to reach the woman he loves before a killer can snuff out their happily ever after.

Linzi says

I really think this was the best of the whole series so far. especially after the pretty mediocre last book (where, when he was revealed, I actually had to look back to see who the heck the bad guy was after our very brief meeting with him!)

My only complaint about the last few books is that I REALLY wish the author would look up what intoned means and stop using it as a substitute for said or replied or quipped or retorted or whatever the heck it is she really wants to say. And if she knows what it means and is using meaning that they replied musically, with a particularly tonal quality etc. Then I wish she would explain it to the narrator who reads the dialogue in a monotone and then says so-and-so intoned. It's infuriating and jars me out of the story approx 40 times a book!

Another great read

Once again Ivy and Jack have given me another great mystery and story. I can hardly wait for the next episode of their love story and great adventure.

Diana Blick says

Improved

This series is improving over time, and this time we seem to have dispensed with some of the over the top schmaltz which actually makes it all more believable. The mystery is a minor consideration in this book, with character development and family relationships taking top spot. FYI, why does everyone think guns have to be "registered"? That is not the case in most jurisdictions. This is brought up at one point in the story, so unless you clarified that your town had a special circumstance, this comes off like an error in fact. The only federal requirement is a background check if you are purchasing a weapon from a dealer. There is no registration for weapons other than automatics which require a special federal license.

My least favorite so far

Love Jack and Ivy. However, this book really annoyed me. By now Ivy should have coincidence in her relationship. I found her insecurity to be a bit redundant. Also found the drama with Jack's family a bit boring.

Elisa Hordon says

Ivy and Jack are back and ready to spend their first Thanksgiving together, but things go awry when Jacks mother and sister show up unannounced and cause upsets and then there is a new murder to solve.

What an action packed mystery this one was. Ivy is just pure magic, she is as sweet as she is stubborn so when Jacks control freak of a mother bursts into town determined to move her son back to the city you just know there will be fireworks and not just from the females Jack has some choice words for his Mother as well I just don't think she is listening.

To add to Jacks fun filled life a local farmer is killed with an antique gun and there is more to this murder but can Jack and Brian put the pieces together? Of course they can with Ivy's help of course.

Meeting the Future In Law

Jack's mother and sister come to town on a surprise visit. Over Thanksgiving, when Ivy and Jack already made plans. This is about to become the holiday from hell. Good mystery too.

I adore this series!

I enjoy reading these romantic mysteries, and this series is one of the most excellent. These are books you can share or recommend to anyone who loves the genre. They are intriguing mysteries, but they are cosy and heartwarming too. The best combination for all ages of mystery lovers. Enjoy!

Thanksgiving is about to be here, and Ivy and Jack are looking forward to spending the holiday together. Jack isn't going to see his mother and sister, but he is looking forward to spending time with Ivy and her family.

That is until Jack's mom and sister pay a surprise visit to him, and start to make things difficult. They weren't expecting him to be with someone like Ivy, and things start to get a little crazy. Add in a strange death a turkey farm and Jack and Ivy have got a lot to deal with.

This book was really good. I enjoyed getting to know more about Jack's family, but I was slightly disappointed with how they acted. Other than that I thought this one was really good, and I enjoyed how close Ivy and Jack are now. It was great to see them together like this, and I look forward to more in this series.

Ivy, Jack, family....and His Mother? Oh Dear!!

Thanksgiving is quite the holiday for the Morgan clan. Now Jack's Mother and Sister have appeared out of the blue to add even more stress! There is no rest for the weary so they say and this situation is only compounded when a murder occurs

Jana Gundy says

A great book in a great series

I love the story of Ivy and Jack, they are a joy to read about. I love their relationship and the way it keeps evolving each book. Max is goofy like always and this time, we meet Jaci's mom and sister. There just might be some tension in that story but it all works out in the end. The murder mystery was still as good as the others and the ending is well done.

Linda J. Currer says

Ivy and Jack do it again.

An unexpected visit and a dead farmer - what more could one ask for? Intriguing read from beginning to end and through it all Jack and Ivy's love stay strong. Excellent story.

Lynn says

OMG! Absolutely Wonderful Ending

This book is a winner. This one had me in stitches at times but then Jack and Ivy usually do. The way they interact is priceless and I love it.

Brian Davis says

Really fun

A really fun series. The characters have some complexity, working through issues as we all do. The plots are twisty and creative. And the writing is just plain good.

Georgie Mac says

A delightful who done it!

Ivy and Jack are entertaining characters that have joys, sorrows, trials, and love. Each story adds depth to all the major players. I do enjoy a mystery with an underlying romance. The outcome was dynamic and not what I envisioned. Clever with zing.

This story was my favorite of the series so far. I would definitely recommend this author for story lines that have punch, well written strong leads, and great support cast.

Ivy has trouble with the in-laws

In this latest instalment we get to meet Jacks mother and sister, who do not make a good first or second or third impression in fact they just want to get Jack and get out of Shadow Falls away from Ivy and back to the city despite Jack repeatedly telling them he is happy where he is and that he's madly in love with Ivy. There is also the murder of a farmer who was liked by everybody to keep Jack busy, while finding time for his first Thanksgiving with Ivy that is if his mum and sister don't ruin it. These are entertaining family friendly stories without the strong violence and passionate love scenes of most books today, they make a refreshing change.
