Australiaphile over here! So yes, I read this book, even though I haven't read the previous ones. I liked all of the animal facts, but I was puzzled by a couple of lines on page 43: "Sage recognized them as eucalyptus. She knew it was the favorite food of most koalas." Most koalas? Then what is the favorite food of the others? Anyhoo, this was an okay read, but it only felt like half a book, an since the next book isn't set in Koalaland, I don't really want to read it.

As much as I loved this whole series, it was almost like this one lost it's pacing. Just when I thought things were finally going to start happening, it was over.

It has a really break neck pace, and at one point they came close to being eliminated, but they pulled it out.

They added a new team member in this story which greatly changed the dynamics of the team. I guess that was the focus of the story. They needed to find a way to gel again.

I love these stories because I learn so much. I never knew wallaroos existed or tree kangaroos. They are both so cool.

I've been pretty obsessed with the idea of this series... I LOVE the wildlife & science, the Amazing Race style of competing... it's a blast. But Australia is one of my favorite places in the whole world and this fell a little flat for me. Will I still pre-order #6 in the series? Yes. But do I hope it keeps me on the edge of my seat like books #1, #2, and #4 did? Absolutely!

Kind of boring but nice ?

Amanda says

Cute continuation, but I felt like the story was less solid than the first half of the series...almost like the author is trying to figure out how to get as many weird facts in as she can as opposed to telling the best story she can and adding facts to make it even better.

I liked this book because I like koalas. I also liked this book because I like platypuses.
