The Blue Island William T. Stead , Estelle W. Stead

April, 1912 - The Titanic sank in mid-ocean

My Father was a passanger on this ship and passed on to the next world. This book will interest many and help a few.

A fortnight after the disaster I saw my father's face, and heard his voice just as distinctly as I heard it when he bade me good-bye before embarking on the Titanic. With the help of a well known voice medium, Mrs. Etta Wriedt I talked with my father for over twenty minutes. This has been put on record and an article published in Nash's Magazine.

The Blue Island provides very definite proofs of communication from the spirit world.

A beautiful depiction of the after life. I find it very in line with the Book of Urantia.

I've written about the Titanic which is how I came to discover the journalist and newspaper editor William Stead. He was a fascinating person who wasn't afraid to embark on unpopular campaigns no matter who he annoyed amongst the rich, the titled and the politicians. He didn't survive the tragedy, at least his body didn't. Legend has him sitting in the First Class Lounge, quietly reading his book and refusing to panic. He was interested in a huge range of subjects and the spiritual or supernatural world was one of them. A firm believer in life after death, he was friendly with mediums and believed that he was in contact with at least one spirit from the After-World. This book was the result of his visitations, after his death, whereby his messages were transferred via automatic writing, that is a Mr Pardoe Woodman, sitting at dusk, with eyes closed and writing as fast as he can, without any consideration for the consequences. I don't think the reader necessarily has to believe in this sort of thing because Mr Stead's message is mostly about the importance of positive thinking, highlighting the relevance of the saying, 'As ye sow, so shall ye reap'. He repeats it over and over again that we are what we think. The cynical reader will struggle with his descriptions and explanations for where he is and why ... while the believer will be relieved to hear that death is far from terrifying though Stead returns us to the notion that in order to have a 'good' death, one must strive to have a 'good' life. All in all, I found it an interesting read.
