Judy G says

A short but very rich book that caused me to stop and ponder what the author was saying many times. Lots of applicable references to Scripture. Reading this book deepened my love for my Savior Jesus Christ!

Sue says

This is another wonderful book by Miss Smith. She has a wonderful way of looking at life's crisis with an all powerful, all knowing, all caring God in mind. It is comforting and will help the Christian to look at life's struggles a little differently. A fabulous book that I would love to give to all my christian friends.

Jerry says

A fabulous devotional. Like the Gospel itself, this book's message is timeless.

Kate Hyde says

This book was all well and good until in chapter 4, page 66, the author makes the argument that being broken, or at least appearing broken, means that we don't trust God enough. Apparently, since Psalm 23 tells us that God is a good shepherd, any problems we have must be because we are failing to let Him care for us.

"No wonder unbelievers aren't drawn into the church. No wonder that in some churches there are no conversions from one end of the year to another. We must have a fold that show sheep in good condition if we expect outsiders to come in.

You can't fail to care about the dishonor you bring upon your divine Shepherd by your poor condition."

That point of view isn't inspirational, it's shaming. And actually, a church full of broken people is exactly the kind of church I want to be a part of! I don't want a church full of people who fight and struggle all week and then put on their best suit and their biggest smile on Sunday morning. I want a church full of REAL people who are honest about their REAL problems and struggles.

Anyway, after reading that, I decided this isn't a book that I feel the need to finish.

Life changing

Ed says

Awesome book! Loved it!

Ed says

This book is for Christians only. Those who are not saved, need to trust in Christ for salvation before they can benefit from this book. Much Scripture is used, however, no Scripture references are used. It is good teaching but very poor in retrieval for later use. There is no subject or topic index of any kind.

Susan says

If your love receptors are damaged, this is a must to dismantle your untruth with the truth of God and His love for you. She knows how to effectively articulate common misconceptions and faulty thinking on the human part that denies us receiving and believing God about Himself and about what He says about us. For those with broken lives, broken hearts, past failures and wounded by others, this is a journey of healing. You won't be the same after you're done.

Sarah says

This is one of the best "practical theology" books I have read in a long time...in parts. There were a few chapters that caused this to not be a 5-star book - the chapter on self-examination, for example - but there were other chapters that were positively life-changing. In short, what Mrs. Smith does is hold out the dual truths of the sufficiency of God and the ability of the believer to trust in that sufficiency.

Whether one feels like Jesus is enough does not alter His character, and those feelings are not necessary to take hold of that which He offers. Conquered sin has no power, unbelief has no power. God alone has power, and that is all one needs.

I have found this book to be a great encouragement to me, especially in stirring my heart to obedience and faith. I can live as if all that God says and has promised is true because it IS.

What a great Salvation Army find; I'm interested in reading more from this wonderful (and very quotable) author.

Robin says

Who wouldn't want to read about the secret of this abundant life and victory over defeat?! I'm not sure where this book came from, other than Divine intervention. I look forward to taking the time to read this one!

K.M. Weiland says

Rarely do we find a treatise on life and Christianity from a source that is both about as straight-shooting as they come and as sweetly encouraging. Smith tells like it is and cuts through the sentimentality and the cliches that are often pushed upon struggling Christians. Instead, she offers unvarnished truth in a way that is always inspiring and never judgmental. One of the best "Christian living" books I've read.

Master Melvin M. Lusterio says

Excellent book, high five to the author for a clear & precise description of the God of All Comfort who is our Heavenly Father God Immortal King Florenio G. Lusterio! Alleluia! Amen!

Tracy says

Direct and simple, cuts through all your experiences, circumstances, beliefs. Love her straight forward writing style. Incredible book for all stages of Christian walk. I've had a relationship with Jesus for over 30 years and it was so refreshing to read truths again that cut right through all the junk I've let seep in to my beliefs of Him. This was written exactly for me! I highly recommend for all!!!!

Sally Ewan says

Excellent book encouraging Christians to keep their eyes fixed on God, not on themselves. She uses very practical examples to exhort and encourage faith. Knowing God is of paramount importance, so that we can live in light of who He is and what that means to us. I was convicted by her reminder that God is bigger than any of our circumstances, and to doubt Him or to worry is to deny His sovereignty and His love.

Sally Ferguson says

I am fascinated by Hannah Whitall Smith. In The God of All Comfort, she says the many names of God explain who He is. "They reveal some of His special characteristics... These names were discovered by God's people in times of sore need." (p. 79)

If I am to find purpose in suffering, then it would be in discovering more about God's ability to meet me at my point of need. Struggles will never be won in my own power. Creative break-throughs will never come because of my own genius. Only as I rely on God's vast supply for my every need, will I discover more of who He is.

What do you need today? Hope? Wisdom? Comfort? Get out your Bible and turn to the Concordance in the back. Look up those words and more. Let God reveal Himself to you today through the pages of His Word. Let Him be your Healer, Shelter and Rock!
