Marta Cox says

Amazing book by this very talented author who seems to specialise in urban fantasy. Set in a world of witches, warlocks and wizards and even the odd troll ! This is a fast paced read with lots going on and features a smart heroine and a quietly confident hero, sigh!

The story opens with Tessa a water witch who runs a matchmaking service for Supernaturals looking for love . Oh yes and it's strictly legit because if you want a call girl then you've definitely come to the wrong place! She struggling financially and just needs to keep the council member sweet so that he will recommend her . Then everything goes wrong when her car is repossessed and with it the magical scroll she uses to contact her more obscure clients.

Rob is a warlock and navy seal but he's home temporarily trying to help his relatives who might lose their home. He's acting as a "repo man" which puts him in all kinds of crazy situations and meeting the meddlesome Tessa whilst repossessing her car seems to start a whole world of hurt. Tessa's car is in Limbo but getting it back is worse than any nightmare and could be dangerous. Tessa won't stop dogging his footsteps and soon she's convinced his boss to let her help Rob in order to get into Limbo and find her missing scroll.

Problem is Rob can open Limbo in order to deposit things there but reclaiming them is so not that easy and when an angry and very powerful warlock takes exception to Robs work it looks as if all hell is about to break loose. Tessa is an infuriating and troublesome woman but Robs determined to protect her but this witch is no shrinking violet and is with him until the end!

Such a fabulous and fun read. Well done Ms Maddison on literally grabbing this readers attention. Great writing and an engaging storyline. A perfect example of urban fantasy with a dash of romance.

Originally reviewed on Romancing the Dark Side:

A fun and flirty unexpected romance between a matchmaking witch and a warlock repo man!

Tessa Dandridge is a not so powerful water witch who has continued the family legacy of matchmaking among the supernatural community. Her job is no easy feat, her clients are beyond demanding and their late payments are putting her business in danger of failing. Just when things couldn't get any worse, Tessa's car is repossessed, along with a magical scroll she uses to contact her clients. To save her business and reputation, Tessa must team up to work with Rob the sexy repo man (by paying him to tag along) who has access to the place her car has been sent...Limbo. As Rob and Tessa join forces to get her scroll their attraction grows stronger and it's not long before danger finds them in the form of a rogue warlock set on attaining his repossessed possessions and starting an all out supernatural war!

REPOSSESSED is a light and entertaining romance with just enough paranormal elements for this PNR junkie! First off, I was thrilled to see the story is set in NYC, my hometown...it made my connection to the story that more special. Tessa is a delightful leading lady who is totally relatable, she comes from a wealthy family (with plenty of drama) but wants to earn her own money and follow in her grandmother's footsteps as a great matchmaker. She's a single, independent woman dedicated to her job and has some of the worst luck, but her determination to succeed on her own is admirable. As a water witch she doesn't have extraordinary powers, they range from cloaking spells to possibly saving herself while in water, but only if she isn't distracted! Tessa is extremely curious and outspoken which often gets her into trouble and Rob is the perfect compliment to her strong personality. Her supernatural abilities are not enough to help her out of the sticky situations she gets herself in but thank goodness she has a warlock repo-man in her corner!

The leading man in this story is none other than Rob Shin, a real renaissance man...he's a Navy SEAL, powerful warlock and supernatural repo man. He comes off as a flirty alpha hero but there's more to him than that. To help his struggling aunt and uncle, he takes on odd jobs as a repo man while on medical leave from the Navy. The last thing he needs is a sexy feisty witch with money problems over his shoulder as temptation but the need to help his family trumps anything else. He has a few secrets he's hiding from them and ultimately Tessa, but he's just trying to be honorable and do the right thing. I love his non-chalant attitude and sexy banter when it comes to Tessa...this warlock definitely has swagger!

The chemistry between Rob and Tessa is electric from the moment they set eyes on each other, but I enjoyed the build up to their romance. They spend a lot of time together on repo jobs which gives them time to really get to know each other (in between their flirting..haha). I especially like that the author paired up a witch and a warlock, I love a forbidden romance as much as the next girl, but this was a refreshing romance of two people who can actually be together without any outside conflict. Rob and Tessa are a sweet and sexy couple that keeps you engaged from beginning to end.

REPOSSESSED is more character driven and focuses less on world building, leaving me curious about a few things but completely expected while reading the first in a new series. I hope to learn more about this fascinating world of witches, warlocks and wizards and the politics behind it all. Although this is a romance, Shawntelle Madison adds a little darkness to the plot with a villain by the name of Dagger (yes, it doesn't get more villainy than that!) and also introduces Rob's "spirit" bag Harabeuji and Tessa's grandmother who love to share their hilarious thoughts at the most inopportune times. A little bit of magic, suspense, and a smexy romance will leave you eager for more of this fun, new supernatural world.

Tessa Dandridge has been trying to live out the dream her grandmother created with a matchmaking business created from a belief that true love does exist for every species. Using some of her water witch skills she makes every attempt to create a love match regardless of the nature of the beast, so to speak. Her clients are part of a world where werewolves, warlocks, and witches exist not peacefully but a negotiated co-existence and while they are demanding they also pay very well to find the perfect match.

When Tessa has her car relocated to the least desirable place known as Limbo the panic she feels goes beyond a lack of transportation. Tessa had stored in the back of her car the one piece of material she needs to keep her business functional, the scroll. Tessa cuts a deal that has her gaining assistance from Rob Shin a repo man part time and Navy SEAL full time. Rob will take her on some repossession ride along so that when he opens a portal to Limbo Tessa can do a quick recon to retrieve her scroll. Problem is she is more than inexperienced she is a logistical nightmare when it comes to following orders and staying out of trouble. She cannot tap into her powers to make things fall into place and she is just too smoking hot for him to ignore. Rob came home on leave to heal a wound, help out his family, and earn some extra quick cash not fall in love with a woman that has him not only daring to go to Limbo but would follow her to any part of the universe.

The magic between Rob and Tessa jumps right off the pages and Shawntelle Madison has crafted a story that has every reader finding one more minute to finish this book.

Linda says

Tessa is trying to keep her business afloat, juggling clients late with payment, new grumpy clients and relatives with a thorn in their side. Did I mention it's a magical Matchmaker business?

While on a meeting in town, her car is repossessed. That would be manageable but in it, she had a scroll that is critical if she's to keep up her work and appointments.

Lost in limbo, and her only chance to get there, is to team up with the man who did the repossessing.

Rob couldn't help but feel drawn to Tessa, but she's got a lot against her. He stays away from women with money trouble, always, and he's only in town for a short while, on medical leave from the Navy. This Repo job is just a short term work to aid his family with extra money.

Action, suspense, smutty fluff and magic in a great combo. A quick read that leaves me wanting more from this world. A new favorite author! (for me)

Fangs for the Fantasy says

Tessa Dandridge is a witch and a supernatural matchmaker. Matchmaking is in her blood because this is what her grandmother did. Anyone who has tried to make it in N.Y. can tell you how tough it and being supernatural doesn't make it any easier. Tessa is in debt up to her eyeballs trying to keep her business afloat but she knows if she can just manage to hook one big client, she can save her business and be the success her grandmother always thought she would be.

Things take a turn for the worst Tessa when her Honda Civic is repossessed and along with it, the magical scroll which allows her to communicate with her clients. Determined to get it back, Tessa make a deal with company which repossessed her car, to allow her to pick into limbo and get her scroll back. Tessa quickly finds out that though her plan is a good one it comes with a many more complications than she can possibly imagine, chief amongst them the navy seal Rob Shin.

I chose to read this book because I am a huge fan of Shawntelle Madison, but that being said, this book did not work for me at all. I simply could not invest in the characters or Tessa's mission to get the scroll back. The world was not developed well and had I not had a background through reading the previous books in her Coveted Series, it would have felt completely slapped together without much thought.

Repossessed is very much as straight up romance novel in that the plot essentially would not exist without the building attraction between Rob and Tessa whereas; the same is not true for the coveted series. Tessa seemed to shamble from issue to issue with Rob being there to pull her butt out of the fire. She function much like a typical damsel in distress with nothing much to recommend her.

Tessa knows she needs her car back and her plan to expedite the situation by trying to slip into limbo makes sense but what does not make sense is that she never bothers to fill out the proper paperwork to go through the normal procedure. Who does that? This is especially true because it takes her a month to get into limbo and actually find her car? She knows that her aunt is sabotaging her business but she never once mentions this to her family. Why? Yes, there is pride in wanting to make it on your own but if you are being sabotaged and not fighting back, that is conceding and not being independent.

She has done it again. I am so happy that Shawntelle has continued her pattern mixing real world problems with paranormal beings in an Urban setting. Repossessed is completely original and stays with you long after you read it.

One of the central themes of this book is something everyone understands- money. Tessa is trying to stay afloat in her supernatural matchmaking business and is weeks away from hitting a big payday with an extremely influential warlock. The only problem is that he lives in a different realm. This means that she needs a special scroll that she spent thousands of dollars on to contact him and several other clients. The magical scroll that is in her car. The car that was repo-ed by Rob. Who dumped the car in the in-between- a magical place filled with mountains and mountains of repo-ed items that can only be accessed when an item is repo-ed and needs to be dumped. Trying to fill out the paperwork to get her car back could take forever, so Tessa takes it upon herself to bribe the boss in order to make Rob take her on repo missions in order for her to search for her car.

Neither one of them is happy about her tagging along. She causes trouble for Rob and Rob keeps embarrassing her and putting her in ridiculous situations. I absolutely adored how their romance progressed. While going on these fun and sometimes dangerous repo jobs with each other, they get to know each other and develop a romance. Of course the attraction is there from the very beginning, but is held by by their initial dislike of each other. These two are wonderful characters and I can not wait to read more about them in the future.

The book is told in alternating points of view between the two, so I feel like I really got to know them throughout their journey.

Rob is of Korean origin and cares a great deal about his family. He is funny and very good at what he does. He had secrets that he hides from everyone, but he does it to protect them. He is a genuinely good guy and I fell for him in this book. I love that his Korean language and background was a large part of the novel, as well as his family connections. I really like how he fell for Tessa and I just adore their romance.

Tessa is not that great at the whole witch thing. She never put in a lot of time studying, so she is constantly making a fool of herself in front of Rob. She takes a few hard blows, but is resilient and never stops trying to save her business. She is a greatly admirable character. And funny, too. Between her and Rob, I was smiling or rolling my eyes every couple of pages.

The very end got a bit blurry for me, when everything took on a new plot very fast. I was left reeling. I will need some time to switch from the laid back style of this book to the different direction the series will be going in. I am also still trying to puzzle out some of the warlock/ wizard tensions that were explained.

Repossessed is a very unique read with a fun Urban setting full of the paranormal. The romance was sweet and the characters were very endearing with their adorable quirks- which is my favorite thing about Shawntelle's characters. I will most definitely be continuing the series.

I would definitely recommend to fans of sweet romance, paranormal plots, real world problems, Urban settings, endearing characters and original story-lines.

Mon avis en Français

My English review

I really enjoyed the Coveted series, and when I saw that Shawntelle was releasing a new novel, I was impatient to get into it. In addition, the mention of the universe of the first series made me really curious. But this time, no more werewolves but witches and warlocks and two in particular, Rob and Tessa.

We thus discover Tessa, a young woman who runs an agency to help supernatural beings finding love. But whatever everyone thinks, it's a lot harder than it seems, especially when some clients do not remain in our dimension but in others. For them, no way for a classical communication, but the young woman has a scroll that allows her to contact them. However, when after an appointment, her car is repossessed by a warlock and stored in limbo because of unpaid bills, the young woman finds herself upset. Yes indeed, the scroll was in her car and if she doesn't retrieve it, she will lose her job. It is therefore imperative that she gets it fast! However, there is only one way to do it and she'll have to team up with Rob, this man who doesn't have a respected work. But so you know, he can not reach limbo until he needs to repossess objects. Tessa is going to follow him throughout his days hoping to finally get her things, but everything is much more complicated than expected. Indeed, they may well attract the attention of unsavory people, unhappy to see their belongings collected. But more than that, this woman, who despite her help for love, never had any luck herself and her meeting with Rob could change everything... if he does not break her heart before anything begins.

I confess that, unlike for the other novels by the author, it was a little more difficult for me to get into the story and to hang on the characters and it took me several chapters for the magic to happen. Yet it was quite interesting to see the ideas put forward here in relation to the debts of people. It was something really original and I loved to know how everything was working exactly. Tessa is really determined to recover what she lost despite the dangers, but I must say that despite appearances her life is far from easy and it's always more complicated. I also loved the interaction she has with Rob but I confess I did not expect the revelations we learn about him. I understood why the young woman was angry about it. Regarding the warlock, I must say that his behavior bothered me a bit, but the more we advance in the story the more we understand why he did that. It was also quite touching to discover that despite the facade he presents to people, there was more and he would do anything to help the people he cares about.

I must admit that the rhythm is a little slower than what I had the habit of reading but it is certainly a pleasure to try it even if I prefer her other series. I am somehow curious to read more and see how Volume 2 will be thereafter.

This review and more can be seen at <http://gothicmoms.blogspot.com/>

Truth be told, I had no idea what to expect when reading the title. I mean, come on, a Warlock Repo Man? But I can also honestly say I am more than happy to have had the opportunity to read this book and more than pleasantly surprised with how things turned out.

Having more than a few financial problems myself, I could definitely feel where Tessa was coming from. Determined to make it on her own and make her business a success, without asking her family, who are indeed well off, for any help. Even a Water Witch has to have some pride, and in some cases asking for help can be a physical ache. Especially when the people you would have to ask have been disappointing the entirety of your life, or would like nothing more than to see you fail, miserably. So, when her car gets repossessed, by a man she ogled so hard at a stoplight she could probably count just how many dimples were in his derriere, and the only way to contact the one client that could make or break her is in the glove compartment, let's just say she is pretty desperate to get it back. But when one door closes....

Minho 'Rob' Shin is a powerful Warlock, Navy SEAL and a Supernatural Repo Man. Coming home to find his Aunt and Uncle in dire need of cash, he takes on any odd job he can find, including that of a Repo Man of a special sort. Not only does he repo cars', but wands, magical jewelry and even a rabbit's foot here and there, tossing the items into Limbo and leaving a magical calling card whenever payments become non-existent. After-all, though magic may be free, magical items are not. Whenever there is a discrepancy the owner is more than free to settle the dispute in the Supernatural Municipal Court, as long as they're willing to wait in line for a few years. Except for Tessa Dandridge, who is not willing to wait, but willing to do whatever else it takes to get her car back, more importantly the Scroll inside, even if it means jumping into Limbo each and every time he goes to Repo something. But Rob better watch out, because she may just jump into his heart as well and he is quickly running out of time.

There is also a war brewing on the sidelines, Wizards' VS Warlocks. And one very Dark Warlock determined for the Warlocks to come out on top, whatever means necessary. So when Rob and Tessa start meddling in his business by repossessing items on his evil to-do list, he can think of quite a few imaginative punishments, i.e. an extended trip to Limbo, or even death. Either would suit him just fine.

Fans of Magic and Love will love this read; it's pretty light with just a smidgen of darkness. So for readers taking their first step into the Paranormal world this will be the perfect read. For readers who only feel at home when reading of the Paranormal, you'll be sure to like this too. There may not be much blood and guts, but it is indeed a beautiful love story and a fresh, new outlook on the Supernatural world.

Dark Faerie Tales says

Review courtesy of Dark Faerie Tales

Quick & Dirty: A matchmaker for supernaturals finds herself in a bad situation when her car is repossessed, taking with it her last chance at keeping her business afloat. Now, she must enter Limbo to try and find it, all the while fighting her attraction to her guide, the man who repossessed her car in the first place.

Opening Sentence: From behind the desk in her matchmaking agency office, Tessa Dandridge thought she'd heard it all until her client blurted, "My last date had National Geographic boobs."

The Review:

When I first read the plot description for this book, I thought it sounded promising, so I went into it with an open mind. After the first couple of chapters, I thought I was really going to enjoy the book. Unfortunately, everything went downhill after the first few chapters, and reading started to become more of a chore. In the end, the book just didn't end up being for me.

Tessa runs a matchmaking service for fellow supernaturals. Unfortunately, business isn't quite booming, and money is becoming more and more of an issue. Her last hope of success comes in the form of a client who can only be contacted using a special scroll that is kept in her car. As luck would have it, Tessa's money troubles catch up to her at just the wrong time, and she discovers that her car has been repossessed. She doesn't think she has the time to wait for the appropriate paperwork to be filed so she can get her car back, so she instead decides to begin going on repo jobs with the man who repossessed her car, Rob. During every repo job, there is an opportunity for Tessa to enter Limbo, the dimension where her car is located. All she needs to do is find her car, retrieve the scroll, and then her business can be saved. As she and Rob spend more time together, they can't fight their growing attraction. There are things Rob isn't telling her though. Will the discovery of Rob's secrets tear them apart?

If you've read any of my more negative reviews before, you know that I have a hard time liking a book when I can't connect to the characters. Once again, that's a big part of why I didn't end up liking this one. The only character I really enjoyed was the spirit that lives inside Rob's satchel, and he really didn't show up all that often. Both Rob and Tessa were extremely underdeveloped. They both seemed very one dimensional, which made it hard for me to bring myself to care about what was going on with them, including their romance.

Another factor that affected my enjoyment of the book was the world building. There really wasn't any to speak of. By the end of the book, I knew that there were witches, wizards, and warlocks, but I really couldn't tell you the difference between them or why there was such animosity between the wizards and warlocks. Maybe if I had a better understanding of the universe the book takes place in, maybe I would have enjoyed the plot a bit more.

Overall, this book just left a mainly negative impression on me. It lacked character development and the world building was non-existent, making it very hard for me to enjoy what was going on. I've heard good things about the author's other series (which is connected to this one), so I may try that one someday, but I won't be in any hurry to do so.

Notable Scene:

He interrupted her escape. “Do you have a roommate?”

“I used to have one when I first moved here. Now, it’s me and my familiar, Kiki. She might make her appearance in a bit for attention.” The cat stirred from her hiding spot in Tessa’s bedroom at the sound of her name.

“You have one pet?” Kiki had jumped into his lap, hungry for affection. her tail flicked like fly fishing pole.

She nodded. Unless she had another and was too busy to miss the elusive feline.

His eyes darted to various places in her living room. “There are nine cats in here.”

Her forehead scrunched from confusion, then to frustration.

“Oh, those were my familiars before Kiki. They all died.”

“Died? Cats live around fifteen to twenty years. There is a roomful of ghost cats in here.”

“Over the years, I’ve had a few problems…”

“That’s not what the short-haired tabby just told me.”

The madness never ended when it came to Rob. “You aren’t an animal empath, are you?” Not only was he wonderful to look at, but he could communicate with Bambi as well.

“Did you really think it was a good idea to put the litter box next to your Uncle Charlie’s magic hat?”

“I can’t believe Little Toes told you that. It was an accident. Uncle Charlie left a dragon in the hat. After the cat used the litter box, he jumped into the wrong place…Why am I explaining this to you?”

She marched to her bedroom to change her clothes and slammed the door for good measure.

“You need to feed Kiki more!” he said.

Christal (Badass Book Reviews) says

2.5 stars

I love Shawntelle Madison's Coveted series, but Repossessed just didn't work quite as well for me. I did like the characters and I think the world started to fill itself in towards the end, but I still had some issues with a few elements.

Tessa is working as a supernatural matchmaker, but her business isn't making as much money as she had hoped. Because of her lack of funds, Rob has to repo her car which also has her Smythe scroll in it. Tessa uses the scroll to contact her clients that snub modern technology, and they are very expensive and difficult to replace. She decides to tag along with Rob on his repo jobs for the chance to try and find her car; it's being held in magical storage that can only be opened for new deposits. As Tessa and Rob work together, they grow closer but also become targets for a rogue warlock that doesn't like having his things taken.

The main problem with Repossessed is that so many elements felt disjointed. Tessa following Rob felt like a setup in the end because she probably could have gotten her car back sooner just by filing the appropriate paperwork. Rob was on shore leave from the military, but he didn't bother to tell his family or Tessa that he had to go back in a month. Tessa's business seems to be failing on its own, but then at the end it seemed like her terrible aunt was really the cause for her money troubles. Even the villain, Dagger, felt tacked on. Oh yeah, and the secret magical branch of the military seemed to come out of nowhere as well.

The magical world itself was missing a lot of background and left a lot of questions unanswered. My biggest one... why is there a supernatural repo man? If Tessa was behind in her payments, wouldn't a normal repo man be enough to come take her car? It was never identified as to who she was in debt with re: her vehicle. Just how separate was the magical society from the regular one?

There were things I liked in Repossessed though. Tessa and Rob themselves were interesting characters and I liked them together once they worked through their issues. Rob's magical bag, Harabeuji, was hilarious and a very unique addition to the story. The idea of a supernatural matchmaker was ingenious, but I don't think we saw enough of what Tessa actually did in this book. Rob's family was very sweet and Tessa's ghostly grandmother had Tessa's best interest at heart though there was very little she could do to help her.

All in all, Repossessed just felt like a shadow of Shawntelle Madison's Coveted series. While that world was highly-detailed and integrated from the beginning, the Warlock Repo Man Chronicles has a ways to go. I might pick up another book in this series, but I don't suggest new readers start here. Pick up the Coveted series first and then come back to this one. Regular readers of Shawntelle's world should give this one a try to see if it fits their taste better than mine.

I received an ARC through Netgalley in exchange for an honest review!

I loved Shawntelle Madison's world she created in this book. Magic isn't exactly welcomed, it's hidden from everyday people but possesses a quality that keeps it in the shadows. We get to see battling Warlocks, Wizards, and Witches.

I loved Tessa's character. Her determination, lifestyle, and job are perfect for her. A supernatural matchmaker, her job is harder than any other matchmakers. Not only does she need to find the perfect match for her clients but she has to make sure they are magically inclined to keep up with her clients. Her character was unique and I haven't read a ton of books with supernatural water witch matchmakers.

Rob was fantastic as well. A Navy SEAL that is working as a supernatural repo man. HE is tall, handsome and intelligent. Currently lying to his family about why he is in New York, he becomes involved with Tessa and begins to open up a little about himself.

When Rob repos Tessa's Honda Civic he takes with it a supernatural scroll used to contact some of Tessa's largest clients. If she can't pull off what these clients are looking for she is going to have to close up her business. She is already in the red and has gone and got funding for her business from loan sharks in the supernatural world. All she needs is a big client and it will all pay off. Rob helps her get into Limbo, the void where her car is.

They try several times and each time she is getting closer. As they get to know each other a relationship blossoms and I absolutely loved them together. They were perfect for each other. Rob has a strength and determination that Tessa learns to draw from, making each of them stronger.

I am going to be keeping an eye out for more of the Warlock Repo Man Chronicles. IT looks like it is going to be a fantastic series!
