From Reader Review A Hold on His Heart for online ebook

Connie says

*happy sigh* I love A Hold on His Heart!

Is full of fluff, easy love and sweet characters. I dare you not to fall in love with Justin.

Is every boy fairytale come true, Preston and Justin seem very different in personality but deep down they are the same and they are both looking for the love of their life.

Is a happy book!

Thank you Andi for hosting the contest on GR, I was one of the lucky winners :)

V says

This is typical Andi Anderson's books.

Lovely characters, not angst, free of cheating.

It is just a nice, cute read, and vanilla readers for sure will enjoy.

Cindi says

There is just something about Andi Anderson's books. I always know going into one that I will end it with a smile on my face. A Hold on His Heart is no exception.

Justin and Preston are complete opposites. Preston is a straight-laced, self-described geek and Justin is a pretty party boy. Preston is an engineer and Justin is a clerk in his office. Justin is outgoing. Preston is shy. They form a friendship at work that turns into much more.

This is a beautiful love story. It's opposites attract and friends to lovers. It was such a pleasure watching Preston go from being the shy man with a crush to confident and openly in love with Justin.

I fell in love with both Justin and Preston. Both so different but absolutely perfect for each other. As with the author's other books, there are not a lot of conflicts or misunderstandings. Just two men finding their way to each other and to their HEA.

Another great story by Andi Anderson.

Meggie says

This is a light sweet novella about dating a working colleague. The storyline circles around an office romance between Preston & Justin. The beginning was pulling and interesting. For my taste everything between Preston & Justin develops to fast.

Crissy Morris says

Adorable characters with a sweet happy ending.

I enjoyed the "geek factor" in this book. Sweet, quirky, shy Preston takes the initiative in this story to finally establish first a friendship then a relationship with the man he's had his eye on for months - Justin. Justin has only really ever noticed Preston as one of the engineers he works for and he never showed any interest in spending time with Preston. But once Preston gains the nerve to ask Justin out to lunch, a bond is formed between the two that only grows stronger throughout the story.

It's a very sweet, light read with a happy ending.

(And FYI, as an Arkansas girl, myself, I can attest that if you've ever been to Disco and seen Kelly Cruise, she's always on point and so very entertaining.)

Elsbeth says

Meh...artificial sweetener.

I give up, this author is just too fluffy for me.

Candice says

This was a sweet and angst free story about two opposites who becomes friends and then much more.

Catherine says

There was nothing majorly wrong with this story, but there also wasn't much that was special about it either. Here's a couple of random thoughts:

- The characters were cute enough (Preston is especially adorkable), but entirely forgettable.
- The sexy times were sweet, but I could have done with a dash of spice to keep things interesting.
- The dialogue (both spoken and internal) was awkwardly formal - no man I know in his twenties chooses his words quite so precisely as both of these characters seemed to. Example A: "It is I who is thankful for you, Justin." Like, seriously?! I want to dredge up my grammar text from first year English and smack the author over the head with it.
- I can't help it - it always kinda weirds me out when a male MC calls another male MC "beautiful" as an endearment (and after the start of their first date Preston does this a lot). Use "babe" or "handsome" or pretty much anything else and leave the gag-inducing use of "beautiful" for the hets.
- The romance was FULL ON as soon as their first date started. I'm usually a sap for a happily ever after and can tolerate an insta-love story, but this was a bit much.
- And that ending?! Improbable doesn't even begin to describe it.

That's it. I'm out! *drops mic and walks off stage*

Justin is suffering from a hangover one morning, when Preston takes pity on him and offers him coffee and aspirin. Justin is grateful, but isn't sure what to make of the geeky engineer. When they fall into a routine of spending lunches together, Justin starts to realize just how much he enjoys being with Preston. Preston has hopes of getting closer to Justin and when Justin invites him to join him on a night out, Preston wonders if he isn't too different from Justin to keep his attention.

This is a soft gentle romance that takes its sweet time, as the characters of Justin and Preston get to know each other and discover their love for each other. Justin hasn't really noticed Preston other than as a work colleague, but when Preston asks him to lunch he begins to enjoy spending time together as friends. Preston has always noticed Justin, but has held back as Justin is his opposite. Confident, outgoing and fun-loving, whereas Preston is quite, withdrawn and geeky. But, spending time with Justin makes Preston lighten up and Justin begins to see Preston in a new light.

I loved this gentle romance, it was very easy-going, progressing from work colleagues to friends and eventually to lovers with no conflict or angst or spanners being thrown in the works, *sigh* just a true romance of slowly falling in love. Justin and Preston are wonderful characters both of them with their own unique personalities but accepting other people's personalities and seeing below the outer surface. I really liked the fact that the attraction was brought in slowly, while they were getting to know each other, giving them something solid to work from.

I am recommending this to those who love gentle, slow building, love stories, incredible love-making, opposites attracting and finally an incredibly happy ending.

very sweet...I love nerdy characters

3.5*

Sweet and totally angst and conflict free story.

Justin office drone and not really loving it slowly becomes friends with Preston and engineer in the company.

Preston has been admiring outgoing and good looking Justin for a while, but Preston being sort of quiet and shy hasn't been on Justin's radar except for some very loud choices in shirts!

This was exactly what I wanted and expected, a really sweet fairytale like story with a HEA.
