I enjoyed this book! It is a classic warm, happy, love inspired story. I would recommend it to anyone who enjoys light reading, sweet contemporary romance, Texas romance, and ranch animals, especially cats.

The author Myra Johnson wrote with an endearing tone. The characters had both obvious and subtle traits that helped move the story along at a great pace. It was easy to follow but not overly simplistic.

As for the plot, I loved the storyline because it raised awareness for Crohn's disease and had realistic situational implications. Each scene had a focus that was pretty unidirectional and predictable, which made a for a nice, feel good read. It wasn't boring though because the voices of each character were interesting, relatable, and circumstances had twists that kept it exciting and lovable.

The epilogue seemed a bit hurried along in the sense that the plot also had a rushed sequence in itself. I felt like I could have spent more time there, that this section of the book could have satisfactorily ended with the last chapter or as an incorporation/expansion of chapters themselves. Wasn't a major distraction or disappointment though.

MY FAVORITE LINES:

"My grace is sufficient for thee...

The scripture he'd relied on so often whispered through his thoughts.

My grace... sufficient.

He closed the file he'd been reading, leaned back in his chair and took several long, slow breaths. And remembered what his dad had said on the phone this afternoon, One day at a time, son. Only choice we have is to take this one day at a time."

Myra Johnson has created an achingly vulnerable hero in the form of Tripp Willoughby. I'm fangirling over his chosen profession. I love a man who loves animals and I love a story with animals as well and this one is chock-full of critters! Not to mention the pet therapy angle. Blissful sigh. But back to Tripp (see how easily I get distracted by fur babies?) He's a hero with a chronic disease that has him feeling like he'd be a burden in a relationship. That's why he broke up with Diana in the first place -- not that she knows the where-fors-and-whys of his disappearing act. She's kept her hurt bottled up for years and then Tripp shows up in town. That first reunion meet is a doozy! A mix of pure angst with a hint of humour. And so begins an exquisitely torturous rocky road reunion romance. It's all three steps forward, two steps back right to the very end and I loved every tumultuous second of it.

I'm not too proud to say that I love a good romance novel! Particularly the "sweet romances," the one that don't have a lot of s*x in them! And I adore the Love Inspired line from Harlequin.

Did I mention I really, really like romances set in Texas? Oh heavens yes!!!

So I was drawn to the title of Myra Johnson's latest novel, "Hill Country Reunion." But it was the story itself that really drew me in and captured my lil' ol' Texas heart. This tale is fast paced, full of twists and turn, and lots of sweet romance and rekindled love. I loved it!

Hill Country Reunion by Myra Johnson. Veterinarian Tripp Willoughby found out he has Crohn's disease and broke it off with his girlfriend Diana Matthews twelve years ago. It broke her heart. Tripp is back in town working at the Veterinarian clinic in his home town with another vet who wants to do just large animals and Tripp will do the small animals. Plus Tripp want to get back together with Diana. But he doesn't feel right tell her about his Crohn's disease yet. Still hurt feelings between them. A good read.

I reviewed this for RT Bookreviews Magazine: <https://www.rtbookreviews.com/book-re...>

Numerous heartfelt scenes combine with well-crafted characters in the second installment in the Hill Country series. Tripp is a bit stubborn at times, but that adds to his endearing nature. Myra Johnson's characters are a reminder of how we should not be held back by our fears. The damage that can be done by harboring secrets, particularly in relation to trust, is a theme woven throughout. Tripp helps raise an awareness to Crohn's, which is a disease not often discussed.

Veterinarian Tripp Willoughby would love to reconnect with his college girlfriend Diana Matthews, and he regrets breaking her heart years ago. However, he never wanted to burden her with the fact that he has Crohn's disease, so he resists getting close to her. She runs the local café and works with animals, and she needs his help to get her pet therapy program up and running. Is it possible for them to work together without the reminder of their past mistakes? Will she be able to forgive him when she learns the truth about their breakup?
