The Silver Sword David Zindell

David Zindell crafted a glorious fantasy in The Lightstone, an epic tale of good versus evil...and how far a man will go to save his world without destroying all he loves. The quest continues in The Silver Sword.

On the island continent of Ea it is a dark time of chaos and war. Morjin, the evil Lord of Lies, seeks to enslave the entire world. Land after land falls under his evil power. The one thing that has the potential to destroy him is an object that has been lost for ages: the Lightstone.

The call to seek this stone was sent out by one of the few major rulers still free of Morjin's grip to all those who oppose the dreaded sorcerer.

One who answered this call was Valashu Elahad, the seventh and youngest Valeri prince of the royal house of Mesh. Val and his stalwart companions have braved many dangers and fought many battles in their search for this elusive totem.

It looks as if their quest may be at an end and a great victory shimmers on the horizon. But not all images are real. Is the Lightstone within Val's grasp or has he embarked upon a road too horrible to conceive?

S. L. says

I loved the plot. The only reason it got three stars instead of four is because the writing could be improved.

Lynne says

I liked this book. The quest was full of adventures and interesting challenges and characters.

Sammy says

The second part of the first book of the Ea cycle. As exciting in parts as the first, though a little rushed in its last 50 pages, I think. I very much enjoyed reading it again, though the death of Alphanderry didn't make me as sad as it did the first time I read the books. Possibly it was because I knew what would happen, so I didn't let myself get as attached to the character...

Either way, such an enjoyable read, and coming into its own more as the story progresses.
