Elizabeth says

Kazuya Minekura! I don't think anything else really matters. Other than it is a great sequel.

Ruben Monteiro says

Didn't add much of the main story, but for sure one of my favourite side stories. Actually wanted more of it.

Awesome! I didn't want Saiyuki to end, and it looks like it didn't - this picks up pretty much right where they left off! The first story was a great return to the beginning of the first series, reiterating: 'until the day I die, the only side I'm on is my own!' I love these characters! The chapters with the youkai children on the mountain top was really very heartbreaking. I think that man was very brave, giving the children a home, then killing them when they went insane; I'm glad he managed to kill the humans who slaughtered the children before he lost it and had to be stopped himself. That chapter was so poignant in communicating the real danger facing the Sanzo party - that any of them could lose it at any time. The flashback chapter about Goku's fear of snow was rather heartwarming, and it was interesting to get a look into Goku's psyche, he's such a comical character, sometimes you forget he thinks of things other than food. The last chapter threw me for a loop, I wasn't expecting duplicates. It's an over-used convention in action stories, but it still works well enough not to be cliché, and I am fully certain that with these characters, it's going to be thrilling. Can't wait to see how it will pan out in the next book!

This volume covers several stories - we have our heroes come to a town where Youkai are apparently murdering women but the perpetrators aren't quite what they seem. Next we move to a lone, sane Youkai looking after a band of orphaned Youkai kids. This arc is fantastic. It's really dark as we see this guy forced to kill his charges when they turn. Things take an even darker turn when a band of youkai hating humans decide to take matters into their own hands.

The last part of the volume leads into the doppelgangger story arc and Sanzo comes face to face with himself! A real cliffhanger so be sure to have volume 2 on hand!

Very silly afterward with costume changes. Kou as a playboy bunny. Hillarious!

A great mix of humour, philosophy, dark twisted stories and fast paced adventure. As always mixed with stunning artwork.

I'm taking KatiKat's advice and reading some manga to get me back into reading. Just not been in the mood for novels lately!

Saiyuki Reload starts at breakneck pace and never really slows down in this volume. The Sanzo party are famous and being hunted by all youkai. There is a lot of subtext between Sanzo and Gojyo, I think, but maybe I'm seeing what I want to see ;-)!

The story Snowdrop is so bittersweet with a youkai who has escaped the effects of the minus wave doing all he can to protect the youkai children in his care.

excerpt from detailed review here:

Saiyuki RELOAD is the sequel to the series, making an almost complete reversal on perspective of the youkai/demons driven to madness and murder. Where Gensomaden Saiyuki (the main series) sets up the world and the characters, RELOAD delves into the other side of the story: the youkai who have not gone mad, surviving in a world of human distrust and want for revenge. The second half of RELOAD, the "even a worm" arc, deals with "what if" youkai souls could be harvested to bring humans back to life? The only catch is, they come back with an ingrained need to destroy other youkai. Ethics and alternate perspectives are the main focus in this sequel, and much is left ambiguous for the reader to mull over after the action ends.

I ADORE this series. I have never found anything like. I have watched all of the anime, read the series over multiple times, and lots of fanfiction. I can't suggest this more. It is cute yet not lighthearted. The characters are great and I love them all so much (I ship Goku and Sanzo forever). If you like m/m then you will like this as the characters have plenty of "interesting" moments. If you simply like an adventure then you will like this. If you like retellings then you will like this. Overall, it's really good and you need to pick it up.

The continuation to the Gensomaden Saiyuki. This is the next story arc in the series.

The Sanzo party has become so famous as youkai exterminators that they keep running into trouble from villagers who have heard embroidered rumors about them and youkai are hunting for them as a preemptive thing. Humans who get to see the rude, crude, almost sociopathic actual guys in action tend to be a little less enamored. A few times people harp on the mostly youkai makeup of the Sanzo party itself, while the heartbreaking "Snow Drop" suggests that they might someday fall to the influence of the Minus Wave themselves. "Snow Drop" in particular is all about consequences and kills me every time. Yeah, life can't possibly be the same even if they stop the Minus Wave and the youkai regain their sanity. Too much blood has been spilled.

"Run" is better than most "For new readers, here's an introduction to our guys" stories tend to be. It also turns the original series' concept on its head a bit by showing how the Sanzo party is becoming ever more hunted. Yeah, regular people would see the Sanzo party's blasé attitude toward killing creepy. Then you have the Brothers Hayabusa.... *g*

"Snow Drop" is an exercise in tragedy and subtlety. Sakumo was a great character. Damn, poor Goku.... Sanzo's "I would" gets me every time too. Though I wish the kids had eyes! I know it's a manga custom but c'mon!

"3 Years Ago" is sweet. These guys do care about each other, though you have to judge them, particularly Sanzo, by their actions instead of their words. Goku's fear of snow in this is nicely contrasted by his gleeful tromping through it in "Snow Drop."

Ah, "Death Match." It still amuses me that that Sanzo's far more freaked out by facing a doppelganger than the others are. And him breaking down while in a nicotine fit to smoke one of Gojyo's Hi-Lites makes me smile, particularly with the tiny caption of "Ooooh. [Sanzo] does not approve" when it obviously doesn't meet his high standards for a cigarette. And then there's that poor woman he boots into the next room! To safety, yeah, but there were nicer ways of doing it. Non-Sanzo ways, but nicer.

Then the end piece has the Kou party in Playboy bunny costumes. Huzzah! Doku looks particularly funny. Ni Jianyi, you are a creepy, scary man but you have your moments.

A warning: I am biased. This has been my favourite manga series for over a decade and I'm on my sixth (or so) reread. This is as good as I remember. Minekura has given us distinct characters, and even when the speech balloons aren't tied directly to anyone in the panel, you know exactly who is expressing which thought. The art is amazing, and sometimes I'll just stare at scenes trying to soak more in. And the drama/angst jumps in to contrast the humour so suddenly that I will need to stop reading just to process how much I love the moments/characters/everything. Or the humour bumps aside the drama, which is a delightful way to break the tension. In all, that's basically the theme of the whole story. Nothing matters so much you can't joke about it. Though at the same time, everything absolutely matters. Sweet and sour, baby.

My copies of this manga are all beat up, but I know I'll read them again. Everytime, it's a treat.

Saiyuki Reload has started off just as amazing as the first set. And the end "extra manga" is killer. I was laughing so hard I was crying! Kazuya Minekura, you are truly a goddess in my eyes! My hero!!

Update (October 15th, 2012)

Oh man!! Double the Sanzo party!! Too hot to handle!! First, I want to say I love the new/tweaked outfits! So sexy!! (Kougaiji's is hot too!!) Second, Hakkai looks SO HOT on the double page spread of them pulling their robes off. Oh. My. Ra. Seriously, I about fainted XD Third, the "extra manga," as mentioned above, oh lordy! I laughed forever! Fourth, I love the color spreads in the front of these volumes! Delicious!

I seriously just love this series so much! This volume was an excellent example of what I love about the series - there were moments where I was tearing up and super sad and then the next moment I'm snorting and laughing. The storytelling is absolutely amazing too, and I know I've praised the art so many times, but honestly, I can't praise it enough. Minekura-sama is incredibly talented it's ridiculous!

And now, for your viewing pleasure:

(boy oh boy do I love this picture!)

This has nothing to do with this volume, I'm just putting it up because I love this picture so much!! (It really should be against the law to draw men THAT sexy! XD)
