A suicide mission on a backwater planet with a cockney-speaking robot and 6.2 million undead colonists. What could possibly go wrong?

When a legal loop-hole allows Earth Government to force TRIDENT INC, a Private Response Company, to do their bidding, Carter and his team of former soldiers have no choice but to respond. The mission? To investigate the loss of communication from a distant colony on Golan IV and recover any important encrypted data.

But Carter suspects that all is not what it seems and finds that on planet-fall, the situation is far worse than anything they've ever encountered before. 6.2 million colonists have been turned into hordes of mutated dead and are determined to break down the defence walls of Facility 651 and murder anyone alive.

The clock is ticking and TRIDENT INC. is the only hope the survivors have of fleeing the planet alive. Can Carter hold back the zombie tide long enough to rescue the civilians and the data? Or will the walls fall and finally bury the secrets of Golan IV with them?
