Lena Grey says

This book picks up the story where the last one left off with Zack and Travis having been buried and Marcus and Ben determined to find his killers. There are some happy reconciliations in the family, i.e., Marcus and his brother, Frankie and Chase and his lover, Rob. As if there weren't enough to worry about with a killer on the loose, Wick has left town with Ned and has shut everyone else out, leaving the rest of the family hurt and confused by his behavior. They need their brother to help them and he's not there.

Marcus endeared himself to me even more in this story, not just for his love and dedication to Ben, but because of his big heart and amazing sense of right and wrong. No only does he treat Ben like an angel, he has a great deal of compassion for his family and the kids on the streets. He wishes he could save them all, but knows he can't, so he focuses this time on a young man named Brady who has been on the streets for years and is an excellent confidential informant for Marcus, providing him with invaluable information. Bit by bit, I got to know Marcus and realize what a big teddy bear he is as opposed to the rough, tough ex-cop I saw at the beginning of the series. Marcus does everything with his whole heart and his feelings run deep. He and Ben are at the point in their relationship where even though it's painful, total disclosure is necessary. Marcus explains, as previously promised, his history with Wick. Although Ben is not happy about it, he finally understands how Wick fits into Marcus's life and why they are brothers.

Although still plagued with anxiety attacks from traumatic events in his past, Ben is really coming into his own. He's stronger and happier and so in love with Marcus that it hurts. Ben loves him enough to ignore Marcus's complaints and makes him take care of himself even when he may not want to. He's determined to keep Marcus around for a long time. I loved the banter between the two of them about the rules, i.e., what to eat, exercise, etc. Ben gets the same kind of care from Marcus when he's down, fighting the flashbacks from his PTSD due to his past. Marcus is always there, holding, comforting him, treating him like the treasure he is. It demonstrates just how far their relationship has come and gave me a glimpse of how far it will be able to go. Ben has gotten a lot of his self-confidence back, as he clearly demonstrates when he tells Wick off for hurting Marcus. Nothing is going to hurt Marcus ever again if he can help it and, as many times as Marcus has to be his knight, Bell will be safe too.

Another brilliantly written addition to Marcus and Ben's continuing adventures in love and in life. Tom's stories are epitomized emotions put into words, all of which never fail to touch my heart and make me yearn for more. If you've enjoyed the other sequels to the Pulp Friction series, you will love this one as well. To those of you who haven't yet read any of the series, I highly recommend it if you like love, passion, friendship, family, justice, suspense, and a story in which, at least sometimes, the good guy wins. Thanks, Tom, for another moving tale about the city knight.

I love all things T.A.Webb. This was no different amazing series.

Nadine says

I just re-read the whole series.

This last book is perfect.

Tom Webb is a genius with sharing emotions, deep love, hot scenes, wrapped in a powerful writing that won't let you put down a book until the last page. You feel for those young men selling their bodies to survive.

And you've got to love Marcus and Benjamin, such a chemistry between them!

Thanks once again Tom :)

More than highly recommended...

What happened? I think I fell off again.

pouts

yeah, I did.

I reallllly wanted to slip into this newest episode of Marcus and Ben, slide right back into my giddy happy place. As much as I tried, I fumbled again...

and I just couldn't get there.

I love Marcus.

I love Ben.

I love them together.

However,

I think the banter was too much...

I think the cast was too much...

I think the 'brothers' were too much.

Will this stop me from snatching up the next one?

Not a chance.

It may have been bumpy for me at times, but still...one hell of a ride.

3.5 slippery-smexy- satisfactory stars

Marcus and Ben are my favorite couple of PF2013. And TA Webb does not disappoint with any of the City Knight series. Wow. Just wow.

Now, for the finale!!

T.A. Webb says

Thanks to all the wonderful fans who love Marcus and his Benjamin and who have put up with their antics for five stories.

I have some news, which I hops you will like!

All four authors-Lee Brazil, Havan Fellows, Laura Harner and myself-are co-writing the last book in the series, tentatively titled "Odd Man Out", and it will be out before the end of the year. It will tie all the loose ends up, and the mystery that's been building will be explained and resolved.

And...in 2014, we will reboot the series in Flagstaff, Arizona, with new characters.

Again, thank you to all the fans of the series, especially the "City Knight" fans! I love you all.

Deanna Against Censorship says

What can I say? Two steamy MCs with hot friends and a mystery to solve. Add in trying to help street kids and good writing. Read these in order.

Karen says

This series has been such a different and enjoyable adventure. Each author has brought their characters to life giving them a depth of character that makes it possible for the reader to slip into their world for those few hours that the story allows. As well as the moments that tugged at my heart there were those bits of humor that slipped in as naturally and normally as they happen in real life.

Benjamin: "...he's had...he knows his way around the woods."

Marcus: "He's a forest ranger?"

Marcus and Benjamin are so perfect together. I love their stories. But this one oh, this was so unfair. It broke my heart and made me angry with Wick. Oh Wick, you need to get your ass back in town and sort this shit out. I was worried about your brother's failing you, but I see now this road goes both ways.

Most of all what made me cry and cry I did big old crocodile tears for Brady, Travis, Nick and all the real kids out there on the street without the love and homes they deserve that I know have inspired these characters. You portray them so beautifully Mr. Webb, you bring them to life in a way that few authors truly do, thank you.

Bev says

Woohoo, it's out, and there I was reading it in bed this morning at 5.30am...hubby was NOT best pleased I can tell you!! 5 stars and an extremely large... from me, and yes those dancing girls have been waiting to make an appearance

Ben has found it extremely difficult to cope with losing Nick, and then to lose Travis on top of everything else....it just about breaks Marcus' heart to watch how Ben is being torn apart. One good piece of news is that Marcus is now re-united with his brother Frankie and his kids who seem to love Ben just as much as Marcus. On the downside of course, as readers of the other Pulp Friction books will know, Wick and Ned have disappeared, and to say that Marcus, Archer and the rest of the guys are pissed with Wick is a HUGE understatement!! We discover that Wick has been a 'dick' practically the whole of the time the guys have known him....and this is a surprise?? However, I digress....someone is still attacking boys on the streets, and Brody, a boy that Marcus has come to care about, has some news for Marcus...I'll leave this one here....

I know Tom wouldn't just leave us in the lurch....there have to be more books, and luckily he has said that the last book in the series will be co-written by everyone, and a new Pulp Friction series with new characters will hopefully be written next year set in Flagstaff Arizona. Happy Dancing in this house at least!!

There are a lot of characters in this book.

All get finally bonded. Nobody is alone.

Marcus and Ben are adorable as always. And the nephews are cute.

Somewhere along the way, I missed Starry Knight, so that made me stay lost through most of this book. I'll have to read it before I can write anything that would do justice here.

"My Benjamin"

More, Please! Absolutely can't get enough of Ben & Marcus (All the men are interesting in this series, Especially Wick, he makes the series a little less sad..He's so funny!!) Although it is very sad at times, and was difficult to read, It was still such a beautiful story of two broken souls who find each other and become one. I don't regret reading it!

JR says

I don't know if there is anything new I can say about Darkest Knight the fifth in the City Knight series that I haven't said 4 other times. It's tightly written, page turning good. It's loving, tender, and so sexy. This time Marcus is dealing with his feelings about Wick's disappearance. Dealing with his sense of betrayal, feelings that involve all his brothers(Zack, Archer, and Chance) and his family(Ben and Frankie). He is also dealing with two murders that involve street friends of Ben and Jeremiah. He needs Wick's help to solve these, but Wick has vanished. Marcus continues to patrol the streets checking up on these boys, when he meets Brady. Brady becomes the missing link to solving Travis's murder, but not Nicks. What more can I say gang, then if you are not reading the Pulp Friction group of stories, you are so missing out. Read them, your heart will thank you. I give it an Atlanta night full of stars.

Tina says

The quality of these little stories from Tom Webb just keeps on going. Each time I finish one, I don't think he can do it better. Then, he does. I want more every time. This can't be the end. There are still loose ends! Don't leave me hanging, Tom! I don't know if there will be a City Knight #6 or if the story line will end in one of the parallel stories by Havan Fellows, Lee Brazil or Laura Harner. I just know I have to find out when, where and how it ends...
