Just a so-so read. Didn't care much for this series.

This story is connected to the Bolton Brothers Trilogy. Seth is Bobby Bolton's StepSon from Claiming the Bachelor Book 2 of the Trilogy... It's a good read and can be read as a stand alone...

Seth may not be a Bolton by blood but he was raised by them and he puts family & the business before all else... He has a tough decision to make... will he put love before business or will he turn his back on the woman he loves and walk away???

Marsha says

Lord, I was born a ramblin' man... Yep, it's that familiar trope again, the footloose, fancy-free guy. Men have often been considered as being the more audacious sex, going off adventuring, heroing, fighting, exploring or pillaging and looting while the ladies stay in one place tending the home fires. Most of those activities don't exist today, so your modern thrill-seeking male often substitutes activity like canoeing, parachuting out of planes or, in Seth Bolton's case, setting up businesses in foreign countries.

So he's a wanderer, babe, and that's the way he wants it. He wants to float from town to town or woman to woman and he's not going to be tied down for anybody. Of course, he says this right up front. Such men claim that they do it to be honest. (Sounds like they're preparing an escape route, if you ask me.)

Into Seth's restless life comes a run-away pregnant would-be bride, one Kate Burroughs. Kate got itchy feet at the altar because she decided her fiancé was a bit of a toad. When Roger makes his one appearance in the novel, we can't help but agree. He's indifferent to her pregnancy except to make aborted statements about the change in her appearance, he doesn't want to provide child-care and he accuses her of being a bitch when she tells him to hit the road. Ouch.

But all that happens after Seth and Kate have their meet-cute moment. She's still wearing her bridal gown and he has to get off the complicated affair before she can sit on his motorcycle. All the while he's undoing her clothing, all sorts of inappropriate thoughts are going through his head, mostly about how he wants to see her naked without that annoying dress, her face free of makeup or her hair loose without her elaborate coiffure. In short, she's hot but only if she conforms to his idea of prettiness.

However, all the initial prickle of discomfort gets swept aside when Seth decides to buy a house to set up a home base for his bike business. Kate is a real estate agent and he's eager to throw business her way...and quite a bit more. He asks to take her to dinner, an offer that leaves her a little wary. Her gonads have been jumping ever since she met him and she's been putting it down to pregnancy hormones. So she really doesn't want to take him up on his offer, especially since he makes it clear that he's only in town for a short while. She's not the girl for casual flings and that's all he's offering. Sex, fun, no strings, just a roll in the hay and I'm gone, baby.

Kate wants to say no (listen to that voice, girl!) but she weakens easily under Seth's hot good looks and his promise that they'd be good together (in bed). Frankly, I thought she'd be more concerned about how bad this looks professionally. She's trying to sell him a house. He's said no to some properties, is hesitating about others and yet he's asking that they have sex together. Doesn't she see how sleazy this looks? It's as if she's sleeping with him in the hope that he'll buy and give her a commission!

Of course, no one in the book ever breathes the suggestion that she's boning him to get a big, fat commission. She's desperate enough. She really needs the money for herself and her unborn child but we're never meant to put that spin on her actions. He actually gives her expensive diamond pendant and earrings worth $50,000, just like a man might give a mistress. Yet she's just getting it on with him because he's smoking, she's lovely and lonely and they'd both have a good time, so why not?

Seth has to wrestle with his yearning to travel and leave behind the darling Kate. Given the need for a HEA ending, we know he's going to stay. This is fantasy of the romantic kind and considerations like professional behavior are easily waved aside in favor of bringing our blushing lady and lusty male together. I like Kate and I like Seth. I just can't condone the situation that forms the basis for their relationship. May this romance fall into the hands of those uncritical enough to forgive a sheer lack of on-the-job professionalism.

I usually love Sarah M Anderson's books, so I was dismayed that this one didn't work for me. I didn't think there was much chemistry between the protagonists, and the house hunting just bored me. I guess if you take away the cowboys or the rodeo, there isn't much to interest me.

Kerrie says

Happy tears as I got to the end, especially when the heroine finally rescued herself, grew a backbone and stood up to her evil ex - really enjoyed this easy read.

Deborah says

Loved it. Seth and Kate have an arrangement. Will it last? Can they really say goodbye in the end?

Lynn Brooks says

The runaway bride meets her match! In the latest from Sarah M. Anderson, she gives us an interesting twist. If you're an avid reader of her books, you will recognize this family because this hero was the teenage son of a heroine in a previous book from several years back. I love that! A very cool way to get to see a family you enjoyed again, plus get to see him work his way through his own happily ever after as well. Really fun! It was a quick read and draws you in from the first page and doesn't let you put it down until the end.

Pregnant Kate Burroughs decides at the last minute that she can't marry her boring fiancee, so she makes a run for it and that's how Seth Bolton finds her on the side of the road. She's just walked away from the majority of her life and left herself in an awkward situation, but there's got to be something better out there!

Seth Bolton has always considered himself to be restless, but that's just the way he likes it. He already has his next jaunt mapped out, so he's definitely not promising Kate anything close to forever, but he can give her right now if she's interested.

Belinda says

Kate is a runaway bride..she takes the limo and runs..she is at an overlook when restless biker Seth finds her there and thinks she is hurt..but she isn't...He helps her out of the limo and then helps her out of her part of her dress so she can ride on his bike.she has left her hubby to be at the alter...Seth knew him and that is where he was heading.she is pregnant to and the ex doesn't like that.her parents brought him into their real estate office..so kate leaves and goes to work for a friend of the family. Seth tracks her down..the time they spend together looking for a house they all for each other..This as a really good sweet story!

Mary says

Seth Bolton, whom we met in a previous Bolton Brothers book, is all grown up and has just been made a partner in the family custom motorcycle business. He's glad to be back home in Rapid City for a while to see his family, but he's eager to get started on the next phase of the business. He's always been restless and can't wait to expand the business in Asia. When Seth finds Kate Burroughs stranded alongside the road after having run away from her wedding, he just wants to help her out and do a good deed.

Kate is in shock after leaving her fiancé at the altar, but she knows she couldn't have been happy with him, even if he is the father of her unborn child. She can't believe that a good Samaritan has showed up riding a custom motorcycle and offering to help her get to a hotel. Could her knight in shining armor be a biker in a leather jacket?

This may be my favorite of the Bolton stories. I love how caring Seth is. He doesn't come on strong with overwhelming charm. He just really cares about Kate, and that's something she hasn't had much of in her life. Even though they agreed to have a temporary relationship, I was rooting for them to find a way to be together.
